Human Resources for Health

Standalone Course with Graduate Credits

September 5th – December 26th, 2024 | 2:30 pm to 5:30 pm | Every Thursday

The Master of Health Policy and Management (MHPM) Programme is pleased to announce the standalone course scheduled from September-December 2024. This course is part of the programme curriculum but can also be taken without enrolling in a degree programme. Course credits can contribute towards a master's degree.

Course Description

The course emphasizes the importance of human resources for health in improving health outcomes. It introduces the basic concepts, approaches, and models for human resource analysis, planning, and management. It builds on the concept of health labour markets and their influence on health workforce planning. The course also introduces the World Health Organization's 'Workforce Indicators for Staffing Needs (WISN)' software for determining the staff requirements of a health institution/entity. Strategies for effective workforce management include leadership, training & development, motivation, communication, and supportive supervision. Students are familiarized with tools that enhance human resource management capacities, such as job descriptions and performance appraisal systems. The course equips students with the skills to develop a health human resource plan for an institution or district, construct a Job Description (JD), calculate the required staff based on their workload using WISN software, and analyze and interpret results.

Course credits can contribute towards a master's degree:

Candidates who will achieve a cGPA of 3.5 or above after completing two courses or a cGPA of 3.0 or above after completing three courses are exempted from writing the Admission Test. They will be required to appear for an interview. The courses are valid for three years only for entry into the MHPM programme.

Audience

- Programme managers from NGO and public sectors, policymakers, health system researchers, and health system academia
- Professionals from medicine, allied health professions, and biological sciences.
